CCIA Reader List

As of November 2021

The Canadian Cattle Identification Agency (CCIA) maintains a product list of Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) Readers of tested tag readers, containing all readers which have successfully met all CCIA standards.

Before a tag reader can be added to the list, the product is tested and must meet the standards as published in the RFID Transceiver Standards, Procedures, and Testing Document Version 9.3 September 2021 which is available to everyone posted at: https://www.canadaid.ca/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/CCIA_Transceiver_Testing_Standards_Version_9-September-2021_Final.pdf which includes: testing to make sure readers are compatible with all approved CCIA tags, meet electrical safety standards and achieve a minimal performance standard of operation.

Manufacturers of the tag readers are responsible for contacting CCIA with new products and ensuring that their products on the list are current and available. There is a fee associated with testing products which is conducted at an external laboratory.

Government agencies use the CCIA Reader List to help with the administration of their respective rebate programs for readers.

It is important to focus on the exact make and model number from the CCIA Reader List, if a funding authority is using the list to determine the readers meet CCIA Standards, then zero discrepancy will be tolerated. Model numbers must be a perfect match.

This list contains images of all currently available products submitted for testing to CCIA that meet the CCIA conformance and performance standards. The names and descriptions are in accordance with the applicable product manufacturer and are provided for reference only.
